

A Veggie Tale

By JJ (6th Grade)

Cooking and baking take a lot of practice to be GREAT at. Though both baking and cooking takes time, people may like to cook and make nice and healthy baked goods for people, because it makes people feel as though we are bringing joy to others by doing good deeds for people (such as baking). Personally when I cook, it's not always perfect but putting time and effort towards the treat you are baking certainly makes a difference.

My experience with food in general is pretty good actually. I suggest trying new things, even if you think you won't like it. I've told myself a few times that I AUTOMATICALLY did not like a certain food and I wouldn't be willing to try it at all. The backstory to that was when my mom made "artichoke" for dinner and I saw it on the table. I insisted on not trying it but then thought to try new things. I didn't know exactly how to eat it due to the "spikes" but I ended up figuring it out. When I ate that food which was a VEGETABLE, it was pretty good!

Anyways, my point is that you should always try new things. Thanks for reading!

STAY TUNED FOR OUR NEXT HEALTH TOPIC/STORY FROM OUR VALUED CUSTOMERS!!

BE SURE TO SIGN UP TO RECEIVE THIS AS A NEWSLETTER WHEN POSTED!

Please note we share our customers' health stories and opinion pieces, and support for their voices to be heard. We don't endorse what we post, we just hold a platform of respect where anyone can feel free to express their health and lifestyle experiences.